

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I could not have written this book without the support of a number of people, who are special to me in different ways. First of all, I would like to thank my former Ph.D. supervisors, Professor Nico Schrijver and Professor Larissa van den Herik, for their invaluable advice and guidance throughout the process of writing this book. I am most grateful to Professor Schrijver for teaching me most of what I know of international law today. From the moment he gave me the opportunity to assist him when I was still a student, he has been a source of inspiration to me. This book has greatly benefitted from his perceptive comments and profound knowledge of international law. I would like to thank Professor van den Herik for her thought-provoking ideas, which have helped me to critically reassess some of my own ideas on several issues of relevance to this book.

This book has also benefitted from the many discussions I had with my other colleagues at Leiden University over the past years. I would like to thank in particular Vid Prislán, Erik Koppe, Robert Heinsch and Professor Niels Blokker. Special thanks further go to my two successive roommates, Otto Spijkers and Emilie Kuijt, who both supported me in different phases of my research. I have immensely enjoyed the many conversations – some serious, some less serious – I have had with them. I would also like to thank Professor Eyal Benvenisti of Tel Aviv University for his useful comments on an earlier version of this manuscript. In addition, this book has benefitted from the skilful editing work done by Tony Langham, Plym Peters and William Stoddard. Furthermore, I would like to thank the Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research (NWO) for their financial support.

Last but not least, I would like to thank my family for their continuous support throughout my research. I would like to thank my mother, Joukje de Jong-Bakker, and my brother, David de Jong, for showing an active interest in my work. Most of all, I would like to thank Peter-Paul Dam for his love and continuous support, as well as our two sons, Alexander and Noam, who are an infinite source of joy to me.

This book was completed on 1 October 2014.
