

Notes on Contributors

Steinar Andresen is Research Professor at the Fridtjof Nansen Institute in Norway. He has also been Professor of Political Science at the University of Oslo, Norway, and a visiting scholar at Princeton University, University of Washington Seattle, and IISA. He has published extensively on various topics, mostly related to global environmental governance.

Graeme Auld is an Assistant Professor at Carleton University, Ontario, Canada, in the School of Public Policy and Administration. His research examines the emergence, evolution, and impacts of non-state and hybrid forms of global governance. He is co-author (with Ben Cashore and Deanna Newsom) of Governing through Markets: Forest Certification and the Emergence of Nonstate Authority (Yale University Press, 2004).

Jessica M. Ayers holds a PhD in climate governance from the London School of Economics and Political Science. At the time of writing, she was a researcher for the Climate Change Group at the International Institute for Environment and Development (IIED), London, UK. She is now a Senior Policy Advisor to the UK Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC).

Steffen Bauer is a Senior Researcher in the Department for Environmental Policy and Management of Natural Resources at the German Development Institute/Deutsches Institut für Entwicklungspolitik (DIE) in Bonn, Germany. He also serves as Germany's Science and Technology Correspondent to the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification (UNCCD).

Steven Bernstein is Associate Chair and Graduate Director of the Department of Political Science and Co-Director of the Environmental Governance Lab at the Munk School of Global Affairs, University of Toronto, Canada.

Daniel Bodansky is Lincoln Professor of Law, Ethics, and Sustainability at the Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law, Arizona State University. He is the author of the Art and Craft of International Environmental Law (Harvard University Press, 2009) and co-editor of The Oxford Handbook of International Environmental Law (Oxford University Press, 2007).

Achala Chandani Abeysinghe is a senior researcher and environmental lawyer at the International Institute for Environment and Development (IIED), London. She is the legal advisor to the current Chair of the Least Developed Countries (LDC) group in the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) negotiations, team leader of the global climate governance program, and head of the European Capacity Building Initiative (ECBI) workshops program at IIED. She is a lead author of the chapter on “Climate Resilient Pathways: Adaptation, Mitigation and Sustainable Development” in the Fifth Assessment Report of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC).

Jennifer Clapp is a Professor in the Environment and Resource Studies Department and Associate Dean of Research in the Faculty of Environment at the University of Waterloo, Ontario, Canada. Her recent books include: Hunger in the Balance: The New Politics of International Food Aid (Cornell University Press, 2012), Food (Polity, 2012), Paths to a Green World: The Political Economy of the Global Environment, 2nd edn (with Peter Dauvergne, MIT Press, 2011), and Corporate Power in Global Agrifood Governance (co-edited with Doris Fuchs, MIT Press, 2009).

Simon Dalby, formerly at Carleton University, Ontario, Canada, is now CIGI Chair in the Political Economy of Climate Change at the Balsillie School of International Affairs in Waterloo, Ontario, Canada, and is author of Environmental Security (University of Minnesota Press, 2002), Security and Environmental Change (Polity, 2009) and co-editor of the journal Geopolitics.

Radoslav S. Dimitrov is an Associate Professor at Western University in Canada. He is consultant to the World Business Council on Sustainable Development and has served on the European Union delegation at UN climate negotiations. He is the author of Science and International Environmental Policy (Rowman and Littlefield, 2006).

Robert Falkner is Reader in International Relations at the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE). He is an Associate of the Grantham Research Institute on Climate Change and the Environment at LSE and an Associate Fellow of the Energy, Environment and Resources department at Chatham House. He is the author of Business Power and Conflict in International Environmental Politics (Palgrave Macmillan, 2008).

Doris Fuchs is Professor of International Relations at the University of Münster, Germany. Her research focuses on corporate structural and discursive power, sustainable development/consumption, and food politics and policy. She is the author of Business Power in Global Governance (Lynne Rienner, 2007) and has published numerous articles in peer-reviewed journals such as Millennium, Global Environmental Politics, International Interactions, Agriculture and Human Values, Food Policy, and Energy Policy.

Lars H. Gulbrandsen is Senior Research Fellow and Director of the Global Governance and Sustainable Development research program at the Fridtjof Nansen Institute, Norway. He is the author of Transnational Environmental Governance: The Emergence and Effects of the Certification of Forests and Fisheries (Edward Elgar, 2010).

Aarti Gupta is Senior Lecturer (tenured) with the Environmental Policy Group at Wageningen University's Department of Social Sciences, the Netherlands. She is also a Senior Fellow of the Earth System Governance Project and Associate Editor of the journal Global Environmental Politics. Her research and publications focus on global risk and environmental governance and the role of science, knowledge, and transparency therein.

Joyeeta Gupta is Professor of Environment and Development in the Global South of the Amsterdam Institute for Social Science Research at the University of Amsterdam and at UNESCO-IHE Institute for Water Education in Delft, the Netherlands.

Stuart Harrop is Professor of Wildlife Management Law and Director of the Durrell Institute of Conservation and Ecology in the School of Anthropology and Conservation at the University of Kent, UK. His research concentrates on the field of international law and policy relating to biodiversity conservation.

Cameron Hepburn is a Senior Research Fellow at the Grantham Research Institute at the LSE and a Fellow of New College, Oxford. He has degrees in law and engineering, a doctorate in economics, and is the author of peer-reviewed publications in economics, biology, philosophy, engineering, and public policy. He is involved in policy formation, including as a member of the Department of Energy and Climate Change (UK) Secretary of State's Economics Advisory Group. He has also had an entrepreneurial career, co-founding two successful businesses and investing in several other start-ups.

Matthew J. Hoffmann is an Associate Professor of International Relations at the University of Toronto, Canada, and Co-Director of the Environmental Governance Lab at the Munk School of Global Affairs there. He is the author of Climate Governance at the Crossroads: Experimenting with a Global Response after Kyoto (Oxford University Press, 2012).

David Humphreys is Senior Lecturer in Environmental Policy at The Open University (UK), where he specializes in the global politics of deforestation and climate change. His book Logjam: Deforestation and the Crisis of Global Governance (Earthscan, 2006) won the International Studies Association's Harold and Margaret Sprout Award for 2008.

Michael Jacobs is Visiting Professor at the Grantham Research Institute on Climate Change and the Environment at the London School of Economics and Political Science, and in the School of Public Policy at University College London. A former Special Advisor to the UK Chancellor of the Exchequer and Prime Minister (2004–2010), his books include The Green Economy: Environment, Sustainable Development and the Politics of the Future (Pluto Press, 1991).

Nico Jaspers is a post-doctoral researcher at the Freie Universität Berlin, Germany. He received a doctorate in international relations from the London School of Economics and Political Science in 2011. He has published widely on nanotechnology policy and in 2009 co-authored an EU-commissioned report on transatlantic cooperation in nanotechnology regulation.

Jonas Meckling is an Associate with the Belfer Center for Science and International Affairs at Harvard University, USA. He is Senior Advisor for Transatlantic Cooperation on Energy and Climate to the German Federal Ministry of the Environment. He is the author of Carbon Coalitions: Business, Climate Politics, and the Rise of Emissions Trading (MIT Press, 2011).

Peter Newell is Professor of International Relations and Director of the Centre for Global Political Economy at the University of Sussex, UK. He is author most recently of Globalization and the Environment: Capitalism, Ecology and Power (Polity, 2012) and co-author of Climate Capitalism (with Matthew Paterson; Cambridge University Press, 2010) and Governing Climate Change (with Harriet Bulkeley; Routledge, 2010).

Edward Page is Associate Professor in Political Theory at the University of Warwick, UK. His research interests cover a range of topics in contemporary political theory, environmental politics, applied ethics, and global climate change. He has published articles in journals such as Environmental Politics, Political Studies, The Monist, and International Theory, and is the author of Climate Change, Justice and Future Generations (Edward Elgar, 2006).

Susan Park is a Senior Lecturer in International Relations at the University of Sydney, Australia. She has published in a range of International Relations journals including International Politics, Global Environmental Politics, and Global Governance. In 2010 she published World Bank Group Interactions with Environmentalists (Manchester University Press) and co-edited Owning Development: Creating Policy Norms in the IMF and the World Bank (with Antje Vetterlein; Cambridge University Press).

Markus Salomon is a marine biologist working for the German Advisory Council on the Environment, an independent scientific council giving advice to the German federal government. He recently published "Towards a Sustainable Fisheries Policy in Europe," Fish and Fisheries (with K. Holm-Müller; 2012).

Miranda Schreurs is director of the Environmental Policy Research Centre (Forschungszentrum für Umweltpolitik) and Professor of Comparative Politics at the Freie Universität Berlin, Germany. She is a member of the German Environment Advisory Council, chair of the European Environment and Sustainable Development Advisory Councils, and was a member of the German Ethics Commission on a Safe Energy Supply.

Henrik Selin is an Associate Professor in the Department of International Relations at Boston University, USA. He is the author of Global Governance of Hazardous Chemicals (MIT Press, 2010) as well as a numerous journal articles and book chapters on the politics and management of hazardous substances and wastes.

Benjamin K. Sovacool is an Associate Professor at Vermont Law School, USA, where he also directs the Energy Security and Justice Program at the Institute for Energy and the Environment. He is a contributing author to the forthcoming Fifth Assessment from the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, as well as the author, co-author, or editor of 12 books and almost 200 peer-reviewed articles on energy and climate-change issues.

Hannes Stephan is a Lecturer in Environmental Politics and Policy at the University of Stirling, Scotland. His co-authored article “International Climate Policy after Copenhagen: Towards a ‘Building Blocks’ Approach” appeared in 2010 in Global Policy. Another article on the transatlantic cultural politics of GM foods and crops was published in 2012 in Global Environmental Politics.

Johannes Stripple is Associate Professor at the Department of Political Science, Lund University, Sweden. His research interests lie at the intersection of International Relations theory and global environmental politics. His recent research has covered European and international climate policy, carbon markets, renewable energy, sinks, scenarios and governmentalities around climate change, carbon, and the Earth System.

Christopher Wright undertook the research underpinning his contribution to this volume while a Senior Researcher at the Centre for Development and Environment, University of Oslo, Norway. He is currently a Senior Analyst at Norges Bank Investment Management, the division of the Norwegian central bank which manages the Norwegian Government Pension Fund – Global.