URBAN NEEDS IN TEACHER EDUCATION (UNITE) is a dynamic nonprofit organization whose membership consists of talented and dedicated pre- and in-service teachers around the United States of America. These educators self-select to continue their professional development on their own time to better teach the students in their classrooms and serve the urban communities in which their schools are situated. This book is a result of the persistent fervor in which UNITE teachers demonstrate in the pursuit of new knowledge and skills. It is our hope as authors that we capture the spirit of UNITE and bring the knowledge of our organization and its members to a wider audience.

Although UNITE is thankful to the many individuals who have seen to its success over the years, we would like to especially thank those by name who have made this book a reality:

Colleen Burger: editor

Kathryn Kloepper: contributor of materials and book design

Greg Michie: friend, advisor, and forwarder of material

Kari Podany: contributor of materials and visual images

Kim Heilenbach: contributor of materials and book design

Joseph Roth: book design

Gregory Fairbank: book design

Eva Lawrence: book design

This book is made useful by its many exemplars, interactive tutorials, and online content for which we relied heavily on practicing teachers and philanthropic organizations to provide a wide array of coverage across contents and grade levels. These insightful works were provided in part by Carmela Balice, the Chicago Foundation for Education, Donorschoose.org, John Dudley, Katie Lyons, Megan McCoy, Michael Mettenburg, and Rachel Perveiler.

Finally, thank you to the friends, family, and supporters who have made UNITE, this book, and so much more a reality. Without your constant presence, our work would cease to matter.
