Acknowledgements

I would like to express my deep gratitude to the following people and institutions who have made possible this study:

Bernabe “Dante” Buscayno, Fatima “Fats” Penilla, PLF-TILCO area communities, particularly Barangay San Jose, and the PLF-TILCO staff members and Tarlac government functionaries who facilitated my case study on the PLF-TILCO; Horacio “Boy” Morales, Myron Gawigawen; the CFPI Central Staff Office; CFPI Bulacan Field Area staff members, the farmers of the Tarcan Mulawin MPCI, Samahan ng Pinagsikapan SHG, Kaunlaran MPCI, Nagkakaisang Magsasaka ng Frances, Baka-bakahan MPCI; Bulacan officials of the Aniban ng mga Manggagawa sa Agrikultura; Bulacan government functionaries; and the Bulacan NGO/PO-affiliates of the Partnership for Agrarian Reform and Rural Development Services (PARRDS) who facilitated my case study on the CFPI. The PLF-TILCO’s and CFPI’s warmth and accommodation of my field work needs has made my research experience a most valuable one;

Dr. Jack Arn who patiently read through several drafts of this study. I am also most grateful to him for agreeing to be my supervisor and providing the needed guidance to finish my research work;

The Department of Politics and Public Administration, The University of Hong Kong which provided me a pleasant academic home while doing my dissertation; The University of Hong Kong for granting me a three-year post-graduate studentship. This enabled me to devote full-time to my dissertation work; The University of Hong Kong School of Research Studies, Research Student Support Fund 1995-1997 and the Hong Kong Wong Clan Association Scholarship in Social Sciences 1994-1995 for financial support for my field work expenses;

Prof. Benedict J. Tria Kerkvliet and Prof. Jesucita Sodusta for taking time out from their very busy schedules to be my examiners and to share their critical thoughts and suggestions concerning this study;

The Department of Political Science, University of the Philippines for its continuing support for my academic career and for granting me study leave with pay for the whole duration of my PhD work;

Lola Pat Castro-Valdes and Aching Mel de la Cruz and family for sharing their home with me while I was in Tarlac; Mrs. Elisa S. Encarnacion for providing me logistical assistance to do my field work in Tarlac and Bulacan and Chuck Encarnacion for the use of his computer; and Eduardo C. Tadem for invaluable intellectual, emotional, editing and computer support.
